I'm Emanuel "Boo" Milton

Emanuel "Boo" Milton is a powerful public speaker, community impact strategist, and energetic youth advocate. Known as a connector, Boo is an innovator that has put his ability to mobilize communities at the forefront of his leadership. As the Founder and CEO of Cure with Love Strategies, LLC, his activism has received recognition from The Obama Foundation, national media attention including Live with Kelly and Ryan, and social media giants Meta (formerly Facebook). Boo is no stranger to the spotlight, as he held the number one Nielsen-rated show in the Baton Rouge market while studying at the University of Louisiana, Lafayette, and has rap skills that gained attention on YouTube in his early teens. Emanuel uses his online presence to amplify the needs of the communities he works with, uplifting brands with creative launch initiatives, and making his mark through mentoring and developing programs for the leaders of tomorrow.

Emanuel's heart is in creating healthier communities. He currently serves on the Advisory Board for Cities United, steering national conversations around violence reduction among young black males through youth-adult partnerships and youth voice.

AS SEEN ON:

While Emanuel advocates for others, growing up in an urban area and his own healing is what has led him to mentor, consult, and speak on behalf of kids, business owners, and young Black entrepreneurs. Boo has created several events that were inspired through his own lived experiences of not having the means or simply needing to find a way to make ends meet.

Emanuel stated, "I really enjoy connecting with people, sharing my experience, hearing theirs, and building from it."

His company, Cure with Love Strategies focuses on community impact initiatives including Spark Box, which distributed over 3,000 activity kits to kids across the U.S. during the COVID-19 pandemic, and ignited conversation with his appearance on the Live with Kelly and Ryan show. As an event producer, Boo emanates hope with his magnetic personality and brings together celebrities and local businesses for events like the All-Star Dodgeball Tournament, and initiatives such as Drive-In Wifi and the C.H.I.L.L. program.
